

Category: Bestuur der Luchtvaart

Created: Monday, 07 January 2019 20:46 - Last Updated: Monday, 07 January 2019 20:46

Published: Monday, 07 January 2019 20:46

Written by: Administrator

Hits: 644

~~One of those "The Days"~~.

---

Today had a visit of the DGLV (Belgian aviation authorities) for a planned inspection of my wings and fuselage.

It's always a bit stressy but Mr Brotcorne is truly a very positive and helpfull person who also brings ideas and suggestions on the build.

He started by inspecting both wings, flaps and ailerons checking every little detail.

By noon he started the inspection of the main structure of the fuselage.

All structures were checked and approved.

Some very minor remarks to be done and received some good tip on my engine bracket problem.

I am now allowed to close all the covers and bottom wing skins.

The next time mr Brotcorne will come, will be when the entire plane is ready for it's first flight with all inspectino covers still open for the final inspection.

This was another milestone day and a confirmation that the work done over all these years has been good.