Continuing rivetting the left wing inner bottom skin.

A slow process that needs a lot of patience. I am getting better at using the camera and semi blind rivetting but still it's certainly not going at the speed I expected.

I read that some people do this in a day. I really don't understand how that is possible. I'm probably too critical again but then again, I have to fly this thing one day...
