I could not resist making a temporary assembly of the full empennage section.

All fits nicely so far and there are no things to report. The rolled edges seem to fit nicely in the back of both stabulo's. The final adjustments and fitting will have to be done once we start final assembly. But that won't be for the first 2 years I guess.

This moment of glory and achievement of the first real milestone leads to the following Van's builders classic shot : You can notice a first preliminary 'RV grin'

In the picture here with my buddy builder Fred Borloo who dropped by to help me out with the final work on the empennage and start of wing spar work.

Up to the wings !
